Protest. As a peaceful crowd gathered, businesses closed early.

With a heavy police presence and news helicopters looming overhead, hundreds of people marched through Center City to protest police violence and to show support for protesters in Baltimore.

Protesters held signs reading "Black Lives Matter," as the crowd chanted, "No justice, no peace, no racist police."

The protest comes as the city of Baltimore is cleaning up from devastating riots over the death of Freddie Gray, 25, whose spine was severed after his arrest by police in that city. Investigators on Tuesday turned the findings of their investigation over to prosecutors.

In Philly, that news was met with mistrust, as the crowd chanted, "Tell the truth and stop the lies. Freddie Gray didn't have to die."

"We have police and prosecutors who hate people," said Ed O'Donnell at the protest. "We need people in the criminal justice system who are more loving."

Hit and run. Driver suspected of hitting Temple student surrenders

Rachel Hall
PROVIDED

A Temple University senior remained in critical condition Thursday night after being hit while bicycling at Park Avenue and Diamond Street on Wednesday evening around 7:30 p.m.

The victim, 22-year-old Rachel Hall, a lacrosse player due to graduate next week, sustained serious leg and head injuries, reports said.

The driver, an 18-year-old male, turned himself into police on Thursday morning.

The driver was not intoxicated but told police he panicked and fled because he was driving with a learner's permit.

Criminal charges for the driver were still pending as of press time.

Philly among worst for online racism: Study

Philadelphia is one of the most racist parts of the country — at least online — according to a new study which looked at searches which included the "N-word."

The study, published by the PLOS One journal, looked at Google searches containing the "N-word" across the country for four years.

They found a connection between what they defined as Internet-based racism and black mortality. Areas with more searches including the "N-word" had an 8 percent increase in black mortality rates, which is equal to 30,000 deaths annually.

The Harrisburg areas had an average or below average numbers of searches. NIDHI PRAKASH

Finding art behind prison walls

Fairmount. A new art show at a historic prison explores the theme of incarceration.

Clockwise from top right, artists Jesse Krimes, Eric Okdeh and Ruth Scott Blackson have installations at Eastern State Penitentiary. / RANDI FAIR

"Eastern State Penitentiary looks hundreds of years old — like it's from medieval times," said Eric Okdeh, who teaches art at a state prison.

"But one of the guys in my class at Graterford was in Eastern State. It's not that far removed."

Okdeh is one of the artists who have installed work at the world's first penitentiary for a new show.

Four paintings by Okdeh's students, out of a series of 35 depicting diverse individuals affected by incarceration issues, are hung on a wall near the prison's former baseball field.

Jesse Krimes, who served 70 months in prison, recreated a surreal wall mural inside an Eastern State cell that he originally made on prison bedsheets using hair gel and a spoon to rub images from the New York Times into the sheets.

He described it as a vision of "heaven, earth and hell" that he created as a "subversive" act to take control of his environment.

Ruth Scott Blackson reimagined the peeling paint of an Eastern State cell with peels of gold enamel, saying the origins of the work went back to the concept of a penitentiary as a place where prisoners were sent to become "penitent or enlightened."

"I can imagine the relationship between the person and the wall. There's something created there," she said.

The show will open to the public during a free reception Friday at Eastern State Penitentiary.

Msgr. William Lynn headed back to prison

Reversal of fortune. A Catholic administrator was ordered back to prison Thursday.

Monsignor William Lynn, who was convicted in a landmark 2012 trial of violating the state's child endangerment laws for failing to supervise a priest who was known to sexually abuse altar boys, has been on house arrest since 2013 when the Pennsylvania Superior Court reversed his conviction.

On Monday, however, the state's Supreme Court reversed the Superior Court's decision.

At a bail hearing Thursday, prosecutor Patrick Blessington argued that sending Lynn back to prison was a no-brainer.

"His conviction is back in, so he should go back in," Blessington said. "It's really that simple."

Lynn said little as Judge Teresa Sarmina, who once described him as having "facilitated and supported monsters in clerical garb who destroyed the souls of children," said he would return to prison.

Lynn's lawyers vowed to appeal the decision.

He was the first supervisor in the U.S. to be convicted in the church's sexual abuse scandal.

Property owner arrested for bribery charges

The DA's office announced bribery charges against Ri Quang Wu, 60, who allegedly tried to stuff $300 into the pants of an Office of Property Assessment (OPA) evaluator, prosecutors announced Thursday.

The evaluator later dimed Wu out to the Office of the Inspector General.

According to prosecutors, on May 5, 2014, while a city evaluator was at Wu's property on the 500 block of Mountain Street, Wu "'bumped' into the evaluator and stuffed $300 into his pants," according to prosecutors.

After trying to return the money, and Wu repeatedly refusing to take it back, the evaluator returned to the OPA, alerted his supervisors and turned in the $300.

"This case is especially important because it shows that the City of Philadelphia is not for sale, that city employees are indeed honest and hardworking," said Inspector General Amy Kurland in a statement.

Police report: No evidence Gray fatally injured during his arrest

Police. They handed their investigative files over to prosecutors a day earlier than planned.

Baltimore Police Commissioner Anthony Batts speaks at a news conference regarding the death of Freddie Gray. / GETTY IMAGES

A preliminary probe has found no evidence that 25-year-old Freddie Gray was fatally injured during his videotaped arrest in Baltimore, a local ABC affiliate reported on Thursday, citing sources briefed on the police report and on findings made by the medical examiner.

The medical examiner found Gray's catastrophic injury was caused when he was slammed into the back of the police transport van and apparently broke his neck. Law enforcement sources also said Gray sustained a head injury that matches a bolt in the back of the police van, the affiliate reported.

Gray's death a week after his arrest sparked violent protests over police treatment of minorities. The police report was not released to the public but handed over on Thursday to the city's chief prosecutor. The U.S. Department of Justice has also launched an investigation into Gray's death.

More demonstrations were planned around the country. About 1,000 people in Philadelphia gathered for an afternoon rally at City Hall. Protesters took to the streets of Baltimore once again in a noisy but peaceful march that was joined by NBA star Carmelo Anthony and other celebrities.

State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby, a 35-year-old African-American who took office in January, said her staff was regularly briefed by police investigators during the course of their probe, and at the same time, her office has been conducting its own independent probe. REUTERS

1 Liberal US Senator Sanders to challenge Clinton in 2016

Senator Bernie Sanders, an independent from Vermont, launched a long-shot bid for the 2016 Democratic presidential nomination on Thursday, a move likely to pressure Hillary Clinton from the left on issues from income inequality to corporate governance.

Sanders, one of the most outspoken liberals in the Senate, called for rebuilding the middle class and reducing the influence of wealthy Americans and businesses on U.S. elections.

"We're in this race to win," Sanders said at a news conference outside the U.S. Capitol.

"This country today, in my view, has more serious crises than at any time since the Great Depression," he said. "How do we create an economy that works for all of our people rather than a small number of billionaires?"

The 73-year-old, second-term senator faces long odds against the fundraising might and name recognition of Clinton, the Democratic front-runner and former U.S. secretary of state, senator and first lady.

2 Fatal shark attack reported off coast of Hawaiian island of Maui

Officials in Hawaii are reporting a fatal shark attack off the island of Maui and are barring swimmers from the area's shoreline.

The Hawaii Department of Land and Natural Resources said the attack occurred on Wednesday.

Local news website Maui Now, citing a Maui fire official, said the victim was a 65-year-old woman who apparently had been snorkeling in the water and was found floating facedown with injuries to her torso believed to be from a shark attack near a popular surf spot called "Dumps."

Bezos' rocket company test-flies spaceship

Blue Origin, a startup space company owned by Amazon.com chief Jeff Bezos, launched an experimental suborbital spaceship from Texas, the first in a series of test flights to develop commercial unmanned and passenger spaceflight services.

The New Shepard vehicle blasted off on Wednesday from Blue Origin's test facility near Van Horn, Texas, and rose to an altitude of 58 miles (93 km) before the capsule separated and parachuted back to Earth. REUTERS

Tattoo snafu irks inked Apple Watch wearers

Early adopters of the Apple Watch are complaining that a number of its key functions are disrupted by their tattoos.

Apple Watch owners have found that their inked skin confuses the sensors on the underside of the device.

Users of the watch, which went on sale last week, took to social media on Thursday under the hashtag #tattoogate to air their frustration with the flaw from Apple's renowned design house.

Detroit school system to split under Michigan governor's plan

Michigan Governor Rick Snyder on Thursday proposed a dramatic restructuring of Detroit's public school system, which remains financially and academically troubled despite years of state oversight.

The governor's plan would split the district into two entities. The Detroit Public Schools, run by a state-appointed emergency manager, and its elected school board would continue to exist but only for the purpose of eliminating the district's $483 million operating deficit.

Safety. Child, woman pulled from destruction after trapped for five days.

Hundreds cheered as rescuers toiling amid rubble left by Nepal's earthquake pulled a boy and a woman to safety on Thursday after they had been trapped for five days.

A 23-year-old maid, Krishna Devi Khadka, was found lying along with the bodies of three other people, police said.

Officials said the chances of finding more survivors were fading as the death toll reached 5,858. But Nepal's Armed Police Force managed to save 15-year-old Pema Lama from the collapsed ruins of Kathmandu's Hilton Hotel. "I saw the police drilling for four hours to remove mounds of debris before they could pull him out," said Ambar Giri, a medical worker at the scene.

Away from the capital, aid was finally reaching some of Nepal's remote towns and villages nestled among mountains and foothills, where the extent of the damage and loss of life has yet to be properly assessed.

From an army helicopter flying from Chautara, northeast of Kathmandu, a Reuters witness estimated 70 to 80 percent of buildings had been severely damaged. REUTERS

Appeal for helicopters

Nepal is appealing to foreign governments for more helicopters. There are currently about 20 Nepali army, private and Indian army helicopters involved in rescue operations, according to Laxmi Prasad Dhakal, a home ministry official. REUTERS

Aviation. US switches air traffic control to new computer system

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has switched much of the U.S. air traffic control system to a new advanced computer system designed to reduce flight delays and improve aircraft fuel efficiency, officials said on Thursday.

FAA Administrator Michael Huerta told reporters that the $2.5 billion satellite-based En Route Automation Modernization, or ERAM, system has now fully replaced generations-old radar tracking. It was installed a month ago at the 20 FAA air traffic control centers in the continental United States.

ERAM is intended as the backbone of an effort to overhaul aviation systems with next-generation technology. It would help the U.S. aviation system cope with an expected 50 percent rise in air passengers over the next two decades, by enabling air traffic controllers to track more flights over larger areas.

Officials said the new system, implemented after about five years of delays and $350 million in cost overruns, should reduce flight delays and boost fuel efficiency by expediting departures and setting more accurate course and speed corrections while aircraft are between gates. REUTERS

Witness. Ex-FBI agent charged with lying at 'Whitey' Bulger's trial

During Bulger's trial, Fitzpatrick was aggressively cross-examined by prosecutors, who accused him of fibbing. / GETTY IMAGES

An ex-FBI agent who testified in the trial of James "Whitey" Bulger was arraigned on Thursday for lying on the witness stand about his efforts to stop the Boston mobster.

Robert Fitzpatrick, a former special agent at the Boston office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who testified for Bulger's defense in July 2013, pleaded not guilty to six counts of perjury and six counts of obstruction of justice, federal court officials said on Thursday.

A warrant was issued for his arrest and he surrendered to U.S. federal marshals on Thursday morning.

Prosecutors allege Fitzpatrick lied when he testified at trial that the FBI office in Boston rebuffed his insistence in 1981 that Bulger, head of Boston's infamous Winter Hill Gang, was not a real informant for the office and that the FBI should terminate his informant status.

The indictment against Fitzpatrick claims he never advocated that the FBI should withdraw its protections for the Irish-American gangster and start investigating him.

Bulger was convicted last year and is serving two life sentences.

Fitzpatrick's handcuffs were taken off as he was shown to his seat in federal court in Boston on Thursday. The 75-year-old former FBI agent, a stout man with a grayish red mustache, was released on a $50,000 unsecured bond and told to surrender his firearms. His next court date is June 10.

Fitzpatrick, who worked for the FBI from 1965 to 1986 and authored the book "Betrayal, Whitey Bulger, and the FBI Agent Who Fought to Bring Him Down," faces up to six years in prison for each count of perjury and up to 10 years in prison for each count of obstruction.

The indictment also alleges that Fitzpatrick overbilled his credentials, including lying that he recovered the rifle used to assassinate civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. in Memphis in 1968, as well as personally arrested New England mob boss Gennaro "Jerry" Angiulo in 1983. REUTERS

Bulger committed most of his crimes, including 11 murders, in the 1970s and 1980s while acting as an informant for corrupt FBI agents who ignored his activities in exchange for information about the Italian-American mafia, prosecutors have said. Multiple wrongful death lawsuits related to the Bulger killings were filed against the FBI between 1993 and 2003.

Connecticut

Boy charged after gun goes off at school

An 11-year-old Connecticut boy was arrested on Thursday after he brought a loaded gun to school and it discharged in a boys' bathroom close to where students were attending an after-school program, police said.

The unidentified sixth-grader was charged with possession of a weapon on school grounds, carrying a pistol without a permit, unlawful discharge of a firearm and reckless endangerment, said Acting New London Police Chief Peter Reichard.

"It appears he brought the gun from home, and into school and was showing it to friends when it discharged," Reichard said.

The incident occurred on Wednesday at Benny Dover Jackson Middle School in New London, about 80 miles east of Newtown where 26 people were killed by a 20-year-old gunman in 2012 at Sandy Hook Elementary School in the deadliest U.S. school shooting.

Reichard said in Wednesday's incident a teacher went into the bathroom and found the gun in a garbage can.

The student was released into the custody of his parents while awaiting a hearing in juvenile court. No charges have yet been filed against the boy's parents, Reichard said.

The student was suspended from the school and could face expulsion, school officials said. REUTERS

'Avengers: Age of Ultron'
(out now)

Type: Sequel
The gang's all here in the first sequel to the sixth film in the Marvel Cinematic Universe, plus many more besides, including twin mutants (Elizabeth Olsen and Aaron Taylor-Johnson) and a certain mystery guest from "Freaks and Geeks." Indeed, it has enough movie for an entire summer of movies.

Summer Movie Preview:

Everything old is new again

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

This is the time of year when brains are turned off, rebuilding for the fall, when they will once again be overused. Luckily, Hollywood has your back. Starting with the sequel "Avengers: Age of Ultron," out today, many of this summer's blockbusters boast numbers or new secondary titles, and even the original films tend to be mash-ups of proven entities. But hey, at least there are zero Adam Sandler films!

WARNER BROS. ENTERTAINMENT INC.

'Mad Max: Fury Road' (May 15)

Type: Sequel/secret reboot
Behold, the first "Mad Max" entry in 30 years, 25 of which it spent in development hell. For many reasons, Mel Gibson is now Tom Hardy, but director George Miller — who had to make a couple "Happy Feet" films to get this made — is the same, meaning we'll be once again treated to a singularly kinetic/insane twist on the action movie.

'The Human Centipede 3 (Final Sequence)' (May 22)

Type: Threequel
OK, so we actually like this vomit-y franchise, even the mega-unpleasant second one, which took the comparatively restrained first in a hilariously nasty direction. Here, both the original's mad scientist (Dieter Laser) and the second's porcine fanboy (Laurence R. Harvey) return and this time try to fix a disorderly prison by using the title premise as punishment for mischievous inmates. Actually, that should do it.

'Entourage' (June 3)

Type: The show is now the movie
Apparently, this was a televisual program that ran for a number of seasons. It is no longer on the air, therefore a follow-up will be beamed into movie theaters via digital projectors. So there's that. Enjoy, if this is your thing. And if it isn't, and you have to see it anyway, maybe it won't make you yearn for death?

'Jurassic World' (June 12)

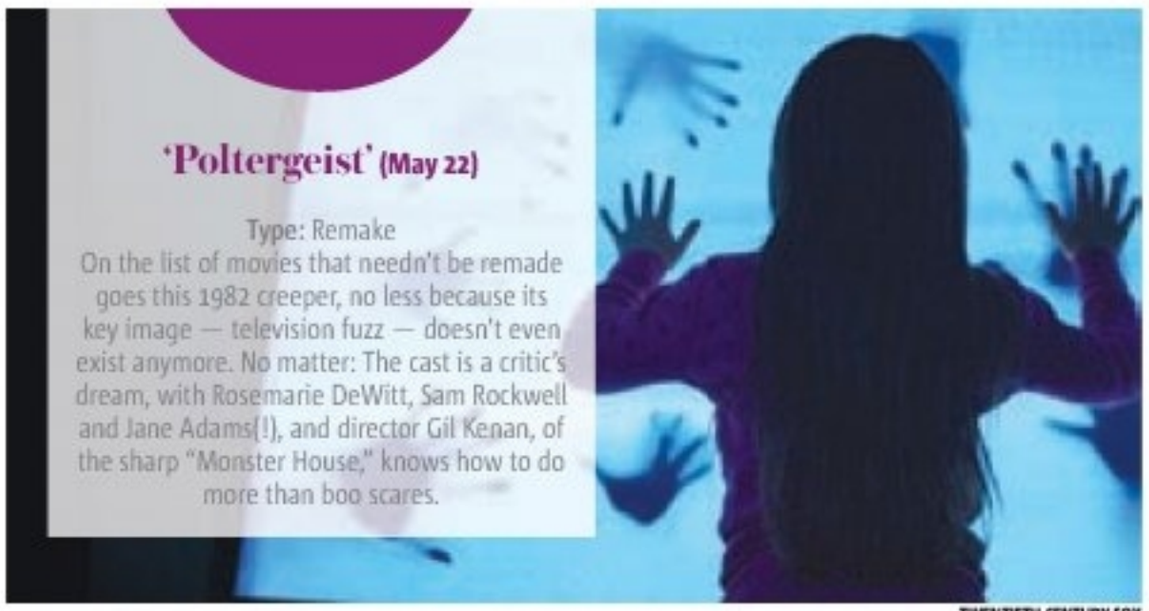
Type: Sequel/quasi-reboot
Don't lie: When you saw the indie time-travel rom-com "Safety Not Guaranteed," your main takeaway was, "The guy who directed this should make a movie about killer dinosaurs." Either way, Colin Trevorrow took the reins of this 20-years-later fourquel, in which humanity has forgotten the lessons of the original three, namely that dinos and humans don't mix — unless one of those humans is a weirdly ripped Chris Pratt.

'Terminator: Genisys' (July 1)

Type: Sequel
No one much liked "Terminator: Salvation," but, to borrow a line from another summer franchise, life finds a way. The fifth entry pits Ah-nuld, Emilia Clarke and Jai Courtney against a robo-John Connor (Jason Clarke) as well as a digitally younger Ah-nuld. Does this even make time machine-y sense? Or are they just trying to milk more out of a barren series? Either way, the series, like the old T-1000, can't be stopped.

'Magic Mike XXL' (July 1)

Type: Sequel
It's not yet clear if the second stripper Channing Tatum number will be more of the same or another "Staying Alive," the Sylvester Stallone-directed ridiculous (and fascinating) post-disco sequel to "Saturday Night Fever." But take heed: Steven Soderbergh may not be directing, but he did serve as cinematographer and chose as director a protege, Gregory Jacobs. And any film that encourages Tatum to be silly is never bad.



TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX

'Poltergeist' (May 22)

Type: Remake
On the list of movies that needn't be remade goes this 1982 creeper, no less because its key image — television fuzz — doesn't even exist anymore. No matter: The cast is a critic's dream, with Rosemarie DeWitt, Sam Rockwell and Jane Adams(!), and director Gil Kenan, of the sharp "Monster House," knows how to do more than boo scares.

'Ted 2' (June 26)

Type: Sequel
After his misbegotten but noble "A Million Ways to Die in the West," Seth MacFarlane returned to normal duties, making this follow-up about Marky Mark and a talking plush bear. Amanda Seyfried has taken over for Mila Kunis, but we'll just assume there will still be jokes about marijuana and '80s pop culture.

UNIVERSAL PICTURES

'Mission: Impossible — Rogue Nation' (July 31)

Type: Sequel
The shape-shifting series winds up in the hands of Christopher McQuarrie, author of "The Usual Suspects" and, perhaps more importantly, director of the enjoyably terse Tom Cruise vehicle "Jack Reacher." There will be insane stunts where Cruise truly risked life and limb just to entertain us, but whatever happens, it will probably be almost nothing like the "Mission: Impossible" TV show.

WARNER BROS. ENTERTAINMENT INC.

'Fantastic Four' (August 7)

Type: Straight-up reboot
When the last batch of "Fantastic Four" movies emerged, it was a simpler time, when characters from comic books weren't yet moody brooders out of a Thomas Hardy novel. Now with a new cast, two of them airlifted from last year's horrific Zac Efron rom-com "That Awkward Moment," we can learn the true anguish of being a guy who turns into fire and stuff.

'Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon II: The Green Legend' (August 28)

Type: Belated sequel
It only took 15 years — psst, you're very old — but the sequel to the art-house ass-kicker is here, albeit with only Michelle Yeoh returning. This looks altogether more like traditional martial arts fare; instead of being directed by the tasteful Ang Lee, it's handled by legend Yuen Wo-Ping, who made the early Jackie Chan greats "Drunken Master" and "Snake in the Eagle's Shadow."

The summer's original ideas

Sometimes Hollywood has unique ideas — or unique-ish.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

'Tomorrowland' (May 22)

If "the theme park ride is now the movie" always sounded dodgy, what about the words "theme park section"? At least this one's packed with overqualified talent, from George Clooney — as an inventor/dad journeying to an alternate world spiritually similar to the Disney World area — to filmmaker Brad Bird ("The Incredibles," "Ratatouille"), although perhaps this one will be missing the director's usual crypto-Objectivist subtext.

COLUMBIA PICTURES

'Aloha' (May 29)

In a way, this is a throwback to the old funny-earnest comedies of Cameron Crowe, who, "We Bought a Zoo" aside, has been in the dumps since 2005's sometimes misjudged (but sometimes spot-on) "Elizabethtown." This time, he has the combined power of Bradley Cooper and Emma Stone, playing the staff of a Hawaii missile base overseeing a new weapons satellite. Oh, and they fall in love against sensitive dad-rock hits, and of course the tagline is, "Sometimes you have to say goodbye before you can say hello." So true! Or wait, what does that even mean?

'Spy' (June 5)

Because no one else will make high-concept blockbuster comedies starring women, director Paul Feig ("Bridesmaids," "The Heat") is at it again, this time pairing Melissa McCarthy with Rose Byrne, but also with Jason Statham for some comedic action shenanigans. Sadly, the women may get upstaged by Statham, a gifted comedic actor rarely allowed to be funny outside of Guy Ritchie and "Crank" entries.

'Inside Out' (June 19)

Remember when Pixar didn't just crank out sequels? So do they, apparently, as they've taken a break from the likes of "Monsters University" and "Cars 2" to give us something original — or, you know, basically a cartoon version of "Herman's Head," with little characters representing emotions inside the mind of a little girl. Close enough!

"Ant-Man" MARVEL

'Ant-Man' (July 17)

The definition of "original-ish," this Marvel movie promises to be an outlier — or at least it would have been had Edgar Wright not walked off the project at the last second, suggesting that the company was into being eccentric but, you know, not actually eccentric. Still, this is a mostly (or kind of) comedic entry, starring Paul Rudd and co-written by Adam McKay, that we're assuming will still build to an endless and clanky action super-climax before 10 post-credits sequences touting characters you've never heard of.

'Trainwreck' (July 17)

Amy Schumer hits the big screen but in a smart way, teaming up with Judd Apatow for a dirty rom-com. We're excited because of Schumer, but we're also excited because this was lensed by great cinematographer (and, with "Ballet 422," director) Jody Lee Lipes, who did up the likes of "Martha Marcy May Marlene," "Afterschool" and the first season of "Girls." Apatow's films tend to look barely serviceable, but this should be a rare comedy that's actually pleasant to look at.

'Straight Outta Compton' (August 14)

You're not a god until you have a splashy biopic. So congrats, N.W.A.! Better yet, their story is pretty crazy, so even if this is a stuffy genre entry, it will at least be one that features hairpin plot turns in addition to some of the best music of the late 1980s and early 1990s.

What to expect from 'Avengers: Age of Ultron'

The Avengers are back, and they've got some new friends — and foes.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.lu

The follow-up to 2012's massive "The Avengers" promises to be even more gargantuan, with new superheroes, more story to tell and one really shiny, really deadly villain. So here's what you need to know going into "Avengers: Age of Ultron."

Black Widow did not do her own stunts

"I don't think you're allowed to ride a motorcycle when you're still pregnant," Scarlett Johansson says. "I embarrassingly rode some sort of a mechanical bull type of motorcycle which goes nowhere and doesn't look cool at all. But we had some very professional and amazing motocross work being done that makes Black Widow look like a total badass."

Iron Man didn't do any meddling

According to franchise star Robert Downey Jr., he didn't have to do any meddling with the script this time around. "I read [Joss Whedon's] script. I said, 'I think this is great.' [Marvel honcho] Kevin [Feige] said, 'You never say that. You can't mean that,'" Downey recalls. "I thought it was a Swiss watch to begin with. So rather than dig in my heels and try to rewrite every scene ... I just showed up, and it turned out great."

It nearly killed Joss Whedon

"There's like 47 of these people, and I really didn't think that through. And I regret very much doing this at all," jokes the writer-director, who was under tremendous pressure to follow up the critical and financial success of the first film.

"At some point during the editing process, I could not have told you who they were, who I was, what movie I was making. I got so lost in it. But, I think it all came together."

"At some point during the editing process, I could not have told you who they were, who I was, what movie I was making."

Avengers assemble! Again! ALL PHOTOS PROVIDED BY MARVEL ENTERTAINMENT

James Spader got a crash course in Marvel moviemaking

The "Blacklist" star embodies the chillingly evil robot Ultron, bent on destroying the Avengers — and humanity in general. And he barely had any time to get into character. "I really didn't have any idea what was happening at all. I really was just trying to hold on and stay on the train that was moving very, very quickly," Spader says. "Luckily, I'd had some conversations with Joss and one fantastic meal with a whole bunch of wine to figure out who this guy was."

There are secrets the cast can't divulge

Mark Ruffalo, who stars as the Hulk, says their studio bosses have ways of making them not reveal spoilers. "You know, we have a Marvel app on our iPhones, and if you say something wrong, it literally shocks you," he says. OK, maybe they don't really, but we wouldn't put it past them. Speaking of secrets...

Hawkeye speaks!

Jeremy Renner's Hawkeye admittedly didn't get a whole ton of screen time in the first "Avengers," so he gets a bit more attention this time around. "I speak in this movie, which is awesome," Renner jokes. "I understood Hawkeye in the sense of he's a human, just with a high skill set. So I could tap into that, and I feel like I got to explore a little bit more of that, even outside the skill set. I thought that was a really, really endearing and thoughtful sort of secret that he had. I'm excited to kind of see where that goes."

@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

The woman Kristen Wiig plays in "Welcome to Me" could be one of her "Saturday Night Live" characters. ALCHEMY

Kristen Wiig plays Alice Klieg, a mentally ill woman who wins the lottery then proceeds to use her newfound millions to buy her own TV show, which she describes as "Oprah but with swans," though it also involves cooking "meatloaf cakes," standing around wordless for minutes on end and talking about her enemies.

The lowdown: "Welcome to Me" isn't a "Saturday Night Live" spinoff, but it almost feels like one. It's a chance for Wiig to take the type of characters she specialized in on the show — painfully awkward grotesques, powerfully oblivious to the discomfort and sometimes even misery they create for others — and see what it would be like for them to exist in a feature-length movie.

There are arguably too many shots of the other cast members staring, heads propped forward, jaws dropped, at Wiig doing, saying or occasionally screaming weird things, though it has a bigger problem. Comedies like this always need to turn serious. Sure enough, a sadder film keeps threatening to take over. It's a mighty fight, though, as "Welcome" and especially Wiig remain weird, never fully giving into the melancholy. There's a super-insane film inside "Welcome to Me," one that takes up about 80 percent of the picture. What's another 20 percent?

Hadas Yaron and Luzer Twersky work out marital problems in "Felix & Meira." OSCILLOSCOPE LABORATORIES

'Felix & Meira'

Director: Maxime Giroux
Stars: Hadas Yaron, Martin Dubreuil
Rating: R

"Fill the Void" star Hadas Yaron plays another Orthodox Jewish woman involved in the struggle between romance and tradition. This time, she's a shy, underloved Montreal wife and mother who considers leaving her stern but fragile husband (Luzer Twersky) upon being swept off her feet by a charming single (and secular) guy (Martin Dubreuil).

The lowdown: At first blush, and for at least half of its length, "Felix & Meira" looks simpler than it is. Yaron's Meira is a woman in an oppressive community, with a killjoy of a spouse who won't even let her listen to old R&B songs, whose passions are awakened by a dashing suitor who shows her a new way of living.

But halfway through, we're reminded that things are a bit more complex than we likely thought. Her husband proves to be less a baddie to be felled than collateral damage — someone taught from birth to seek a narrow life only to have it blow up in his face.

At the same time, the film wholly endorses Meira's decision to pursue her emotions. The clash of cultures is matched by a clash of tones, drama and even comedy, intermingling into something productive, wise and, in its finale, satisfyingly unsatisfying, much like life itself.

'Avengers: Age of Ultron'

Director: Joss Whedon
Stars: Robert Downey Jr., James Spader
Rating: PG-13

The all-star wing of the Marvel movies gets to a comics classic, in which Tony Stark/Iron Man (Robert Downey Jr.) accidentally births Ultron (James Spader), a robot who wants to kill all humans.

The lowdown: In "Avengers: Age of Ultron," there is a lot of stuff. There are, give or take, 10 superheroes. Ultron commands legions upon of legions of smaller robots — in other words, he has a lot of stuff. There are three cities destroyed, one while lifted into the sky, plus another couple set pieces that are, more or less, just stuff happening. Some of this stuff is momentarily amusing. Some of it is momentarily thrilling, but the important thing is that it is momentary, delighting briefly before it's on to the next block of stuff.

This also describes the first "Avengers," but that had more focus and wasn't nearly as monotonous and noisy. The director is once more Joss Whedon, who was clearly brought into this wing of the Marvel Cinematic Universe to pummel them into shape. He's a proven whiz with characters, and he peppers each action blob with quips, little character moments and philosophical nuggets. But this time, even these are just shiny distractions — more bits of stuff. At times, "Ultron" feels like a few handfuls of terrific actors away from being a "Transformers" entry, and it makes the threat of many more years of these things seem like a grim prospect indeed.

The depth of Horace Pippin

A new show at the Brandywine is the first major exhibit of the artist's work in over 20 years.

SHAUN BRADY
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Horace Pippin taught himself to paint after returning from World War I, where he was a soldier in the storied Harlem Hellfighters regiment. His distinctive style is marked by a flat perspective and simply rendered figures, which in his lifetime led to his being lumped into the "folk art" and "primitive" categories.

But as the new career-spanning exhibition at the Brandywine River Museum of Art shows, those descriptions were a less-than-perfect fit for an artist whose concerns ran much deeper than his deceptively simple images might suggest.

"People tend to think of a folk artist or a self-taught artist as having a narrow scope or having a naivete about them," says curator Audrey Lewis. "But Pippin's subject matter was really varied. Some are very personal, but some have a broader meaning, and I think that's what's interesting."

"Horace Pippin: The Way I See It" is the first major exhibit of the artist's work since a 1994 retrospective at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. The show draws its title from Pippin's own description of his work: "I paint it exactly the way it is and exactly the way I see it." The 65 paintings on display represent nearly half of the body of work that Pippin created during his brief career, cut short by his death in 1946 at the age of 58.

Pippin was born in West Chester, and though he was raised in Goshen, New York, he returned to the Pennsylvania borough after his wartime service.

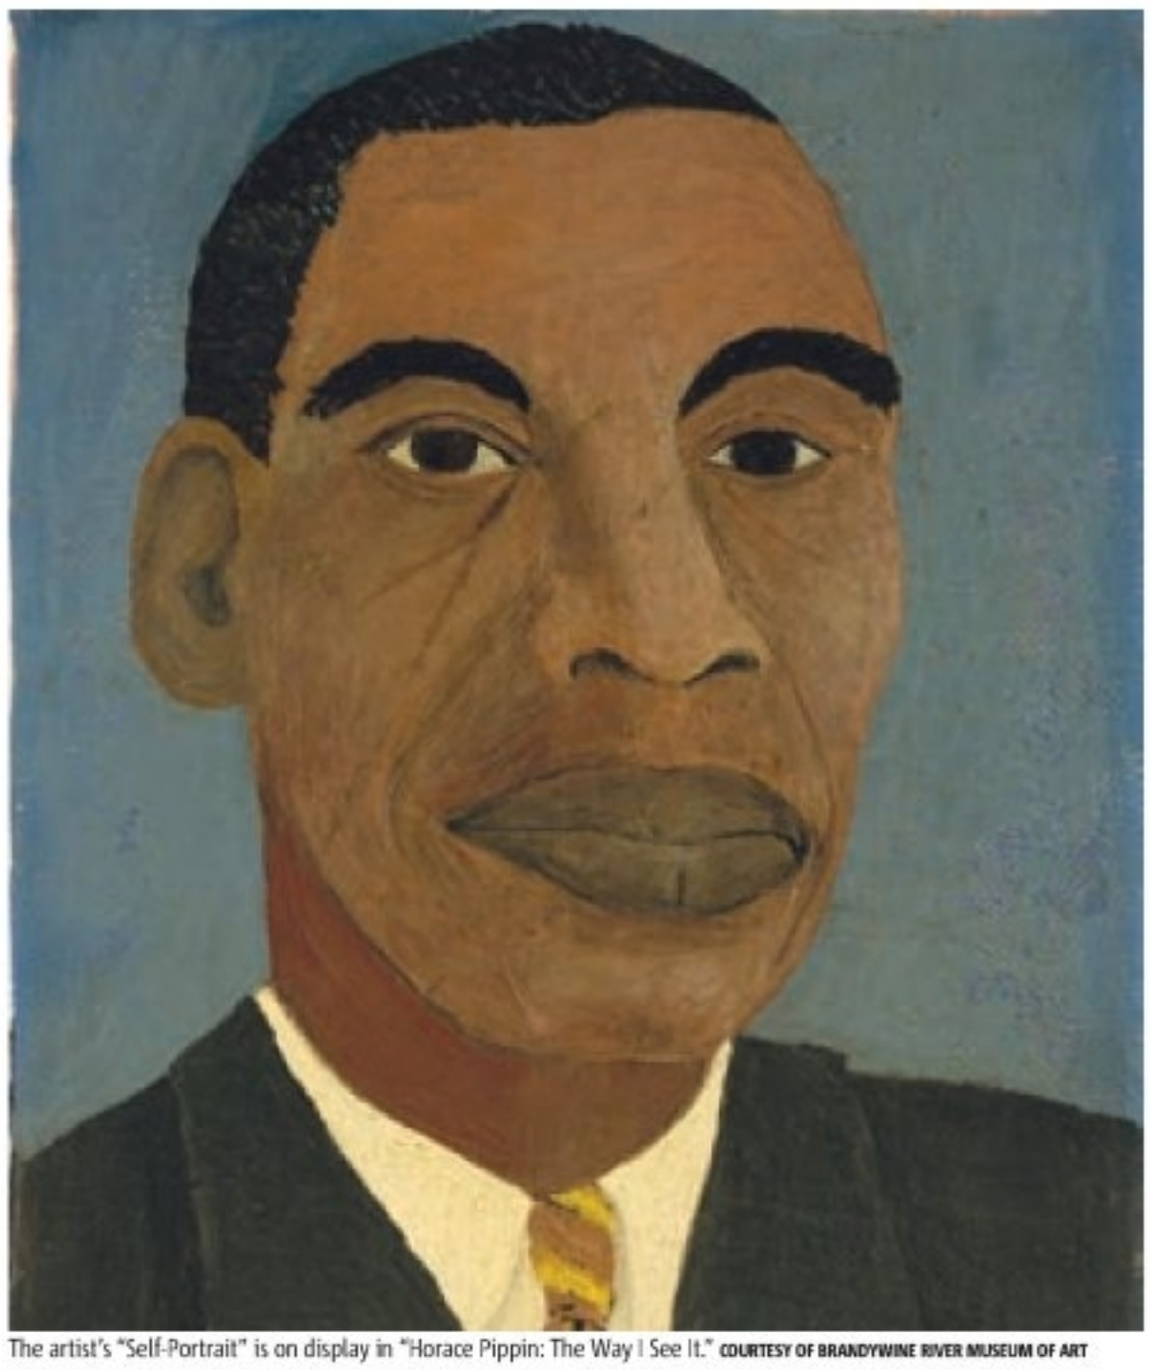
While that placed him near Brandywine School artists like N.C. Wyeth — who became a champion of Pippin's work — his style stands in bold contrast to their illustrative style, which forms the core of the museum's focus. "He's part of the Brandywine tradition," Lewis says, "but not artistically. He's more individual than the tradition we think of when we think of Howard Pyle and N.C. Wyeth. But he did have an interest in local themes."



The artist's "Self-Portrait" is on display in "Horace Pippin: The Way I See It." COURTESY OF BRANDYWINE RIVER MUSEUM OF ART

What you'll see

The exhibit groups Pippin's works by theme, including his scenes of family and domestic life, portraits, historical paintings, wartime memories and, perhaps his most profoundly moving work, his social commentary, which vividly confronted themes of racism and injustice.

"He was an artist who was often drawing from personal experience, but he also looked beyond that," Lewis explains. "He was motivated by his concerns about racism and peace and social harmony, and he expressed his opinions on those issues. But also there's an intimacy to his work that is evident in his domestic scenes. I wanted to express the broadness of his vision but also the layered interpretations of his work."

Letters to the editor

Parents needed to prevent violence

Let me applaud the super mom in Baltimore named Toya Graham for stepping up to the plate and slapping her son Michael and taking him home during the violence in Baltimore. Her 16-year-old son would have been hurt, and he intended to hurt more Baltimore police officers with rocks. It is times like this that parents need to take the upper hand and put boundaries and curfews for their children. Children and teens stay out of trouble when parents are involved. Like a saying that is posted on one of our TV stations that has been said for years, "It is 10 p.m. Do you know where your children are?"

FREDERICK R. BEDELL JR.

The tragic death of Freddie Gray needs to be investigated by Attorney General Lynch's office. If the police are responsible for Mr. Gray's death, then they should be charged accordingly. But you can't blame the police because half of the students in Baltimore didn't finish high school. The culture needs to change, and education needs to be a priority. If you father a child then you need to pick up that responsibility and be there, period. No excuses. Your job is to raise your child, not the government's. Absentee fathers can no longer be tolerated. Single-parent households are difficult for everyone involved. When this occurs, gangs become the new family.

BALTIMORE STILL BURNS

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

CNN CORRESPONDENT AND AUTHOR OF THE UPCOMING BOOK "MY YEAR OF RUNNING DANGEROUSLY: A DAD, A DAUGHTER, AND A RIDICULOUS PLAN."

The girl in the bloody dress covered with dollars widened my view of the world — staggering into the afternoon, her arms spread wide, her mouth open in a silent wail. It was her birthday, and someone in her home had just been shot. I was a young reporter in Montgomery, Alabama, and I stood on the sidewalk, watching and wondering how this came to be.

I knew about poverty. Both of my parents grew up poor, and we were a working-class family. But this was more profound. The house, the lounging neighbors, the casual professionalism of the EMTs and the investigators all seemed to say, "Move along folks, there is nothing new here." And they were right. It was a community where the schools had always been bad, jobs always scarce and crime always common. That girl's face told me this was a place of true despair.

No doubt, minutes earlier she had smiled while relatives pinned money to her white dress in an old African-American custom. Then came a dispute, a quick trigger, and everything went to hell like so much else in that neighborhood day after day, week after week, year after year.

I've covered news for nearly four decades, and I still don't know who is at fault for these hopeless places: those who live there, those who don't or some devil's combination of the two? To say racism is entirely to blame seems unrealistic. To say race has nothing to do with it seems naive. All I know is that such spots exist, and despite all the good residents who struggle to make them better, in troubled corners some folks grow angry, resentful and violent.

And sometimes, in places like Baltimore, they blow up — raging against reason and against all the wrong in their lives and against everyone they think might have caused it. Yes, the unrest is about a man's death. Yes, it's about the police. But it is also about all the girls in ruined dresses, crying over lives less lived than you'd expect in a country that promises so much.

Horoscope

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21
A generation gap will cause unforeseen problems when dealing with others. Face-to-face chats will help you find a workable solution if you are willing to compromise.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20
Romance is in the stars. You will reap financial rewards if you follow through on a creative idea. Listen to the advice of a caring older family member.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22
Family members or roommates will be difficult to get along with. Don't stay home and sulk. Get in touch with friends who understand your sense of humor and enjoy the same pastimes.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
You will have trouble focusing on your regular responsibilities. A physical challenge will help relieve your tension. Concentrating on your body will help your mind relax and find a solution.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
You will face personal pressure. Put in extra hours at work. Doing so will buy you time to sort out your thoughts before making a decision.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
Visiting old friends or traveling is highlighted. Share your emotions, but don't take offense if you don't like the response you get.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21 Networking, collaborating and showcasing your skills will bring about positive change. Make sure that everyone knows what you have to offer.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21 A personal relationship or deal will move forward too quickly. If you feel uneasy, slow things down or walk away. Do your best to stay in control.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20 In spite of pleas, it's unlikely that someone who disappointed you in the past won't do so again. Once you make the choice to sever a toxic connection, you will be relieved.

Rookie of the Year

Noel comes in third

After posting a remarkable 9.9 points, 8.1 rebounds, 1.7 assists, 1.9 blocks and 1.8 steals in 75 games during his rookie season, Nerlens Noel was passed over by two rookies in votes for the award for the league's best Freshman. Andrew Wiggins beat out Nikola Mirotic for the honor.

Bucs take Winston, Titans take Mariota in NFL draft

NFL draft. Things nearly went according to form as the NFL draft's three-day extravaganza kicked off in Chicago.

The draft's first curve ball came when Fowler went third. / GETTY IMAGES

The picks

1. Jameis Winston, QB, Buccaneers
2. Marcus Mariota, QB, Titans
3. Dante Fowler, DE, Jaguars
4. Amari Cooper, WR, Raiders
5. Brandon Scherff, OL, Redskins
6. Leonard Williams, DE, Jets
7. Kevin White, WR, Bears
8. Vic Beasley, OLB, Falcons

For months, (yes, it seemed like years), the Eagles and Marcus Mariota were the subject of nearly every call into local sports radio.

But alas, the No. 2 pick stayed in Tennessee, as the Titans turned down what was surely a barrage of trade offers to take the Oregon quarterback with their first-round pick Thursday night.

The Buccaneers got the ball rolling, and after all their due diligence decided to take the first of two Heisman Trophy winners with the first pick of the NFL draft, selecting Florida State quarterback Jameis Winston.

At No. 3, things were shaken up a bit, instead of Leonard Williams (who went No. 6 to the Jets) the Jaguars went with the dynamic pass-rusher Dante Fowler with their selection.

With the fourth pick, the Raiders got some help for Derek Carr, taking Amari Cooper from Alabama, a man Mel Kiper Jr. said could be as good as Jerry Rice.

The Eagles' NFC East rivals the Redskins bolstered their offensive line with their pick, adding big Brandon Scherff to their roster at No. 5.

At No. 7 the Bears pleased the home crowd taking wideout Kevin White and after that another NFC team, the Falcons made their pick taking Clemson's Vic Beasley.

Best bets for a Derby win

Kentucky Derby. A look at where you can win money on Saturday.

Choose the right horse wisely this weekend. / GETTY IMAGES

Twenty horses will line up in the gate at Churchill Downs for the 141st running of the Kentucky Derby Saturday (6:30 p.m., NBC). There's a lot of money to be made if you bet the right way, but first you have to pick the right horses. Here are the best bets for this year's "run for the roses."

Dortmund (post position: 8, morning-line odds: 3-1)
There's a lot to like about this colt sired by 2008 Kentucky Derby winner Big Brown. Dortmund is undefeated in six lifetime starts, including wins in the San Felipe Stakes and Santa Anita Derby at Santa Anita Park in California. He's trained by one of the best in the game in Bob Baffert (who has three Derby wins to his credit), and will be ridden by an elite jockey in Martin Garcia. But because he has such strong credentials his post-time odds are likely to be less than salivating. Just betting Dortmund to win won't yield a large profit, but betting him on top in exactas and trifectas is a tempting alternative if you're looking to make a big score.

Materiality (post position: 3, morning-line odds: 12-1)
His career only began in January, so Materiality will be trying to become the first horse not to race as a 2-year-old to win the Kentucky Derby since Apollo in 1882. He has developed into a top-class runner, fairly quickly for Todd Pletcher, taking the Islamorada Handicap and Florida Derby down at Gulfstream Park in Florida in preparation for this race. Materiality is a son of Afleet Alex, who won the 2005 Preakness and Belmont Stakes and finished third in the Kentucky Derby, so he is likely to handle the demanding 10 furlong distance. Materiality has tended to race toward the front in his young career, but he is not as naturally speedy as some of the other runners in here, so he'll likely be sitting behind the leaders until it's time to make his move. If he goes off above 10-1 I would consider that fair value, but he will have to deal with Dortmund.

International Star (post position: 12, morning-line odds: 20-1)
International Star is 3-for-3 this year, with all those wins coming in stakes races at the Fair Grounds in Louisiana. He does his best running from well behind, and that style usually pays dividends in the Kentucky Derby. He will be ridden by Miguel Mena, who normally plies his trade with great success at Churchill Downs. One word of caution though; the Louisiana Derby has not produced a Kentucky Derby winner since 1996 (Grindstone).

Will Giles get his speed back?

MLB. The Phillies' bullpen remains a strength, anchored by their closer of the future, Ken "100 Miles" Giles.

Ken Giles isn't worried about his fastball. The Phillies' future closer has yet to hit triple digits on the radar gun, but he has a win and has yet to give up a run. Giles' average fastball in 2014 was a ridiculous 97.2 mph.

It's down to 94.8 in April, but Giles says not to fear.

"I'm not worried about it at all," Giles said. "I've yet to get loose up here. It may take the warmer weather to get loose. It's not like I'm diminished. I'm still throwing hard. If you look around the league, guys aren't throwing hard now like they will be in June. The cold weather is just brutal on the body. It's tougher to pitch in this. It'll get warm, and you know what will happen. Everybody knows that our bullpen can throw 95-plus, and that's what we'll do. We'll get there."

In the meantime, Giles has improved his slider, which was plus last season. He works with it daily, and it has paid off since it's much nastier than it was last season.

"I keep playing with it, trying to find ways to make it better," Giles said. "I'm constantly messing with it so it can be as effective as possible. I think it's worked, and I think it's only going to get better."

Giles tries to keep hitters guessing. Sometimes he'll pitch backward.

"I'll do whatever it takes to get ahead," Giles said. "Sometimes I'll surprise them. I know when they're gearing up for my number one, and then I'll pop a slider for a strike. And then if I get ahead of them, I got them right where I want them to be."

Ken Giles' velocity has been down a bit in 2015. / GETTY IMAGES

Part of the reason Giles has grown so much in a short time is due to the tutelage of Carlos Ruiz.

"Chooch has helped me so much," Giles said. "He always sits with me after my outings and says, 'Alright, next time we'll try this,' or 'You have to work on that.'"

Ruiz smiled when asked about Giles. "He's a special kid," Ruiz said. "He's only going to get better."

That's scary, considering that Giles, who came up last June, finished third in the voting for NL Rookie of the Year and has already earned respect around the league.

"He's really tough," the Marlins' Giancarlo Stanton said. "He's a very good pitcher, and he just came up last year."

The soft-spoken Giles believes he can build on what he has to become one of the best relievers in the game.

"I'm excited about my potential," Giles said. "I know I can be much better. I have things to work on and things to learn. I'm also excited about this bullpen. We're solid, top to bottom. We're going to be an asset. I don't think there's any doubt about that."

Quoted

"Whenever we have a lead, and it's time for one of us to come in, I'm confident that we'll win that game."
Ken Giles

MLB. Buchanan loses fifth straight game to end April on sour note

Buchanan is probably glad the month of April is over. / GETTY IMAGES

The Phillies looked poised to even their four-game set with the Cardinals Thursday afternoon, when the offense overcame a three-run deficit to stay even with St. Louis in the second inning.

But David Buchanan was unable to keep the Cards to just a trio of runs as the Phillies fell 9-3

The loss drops Buchanan to 0-5 on the year, with a telling 8.76 ERA to show for his early-season struggles. He is the only pitcher in team history to go 0-5 in the month of April.

The young hurler surrendered seven earned runs and eight hits before exiting in the fifth inning.

Darin Ruf hit a solo homer and a triple to cap off an impressive day for the outfielder, making a rare start.

No other Phillie recorded more than one hit, with just Odubel Herrera and Cody Asche knocking in runs.

The Phillies were 8 for 26 with runners in scoring position in the series while St. Louis was 19 for 40 in those situations in the series. EVAN MACY

MAYWEATHER VS. PACQUIAO

Billed "The Fight of the Century," the boxing megabout on Saturday between Floyd Mayweather Jr. and Manny Pacquiao is one of the most highly-anticipated sporting spectacles in recent memory. Metro previews what's in store ahead of that fight in Las Vegas.

DANIEL CASILLAS AND DMITRY BELYAEV

After nearly five years of negotiations, Floyd Mayweather Jr. and Manny Pacquiao, the two best fighters in the world and the sport's two biggest stars, will finally go head-to-head in the ring Saturday night. The event has attracted plenty of hype and there is much anticipation about who will crowned the best fighter in the world.

Why is this fight such a big deal? Many experts agree that the encounter between Mayweather and Pacquiao is the most important fight in many years, because on display are two of the most famous names currently in boxing, including the No. 1 boxer in the world (Mayweather) taking on the No. 2 boxer in the world (Pacquiao). "Floyd has won world titles in five different weight classes, while Pacquiao has also won titles in multi divisions and has earned the accolade of all-time great. Many are referring to the richest boxing match in history as a megafight," James Blears, a boxing expert with 40 years of experience and editor of the World Boxing Council's website, told Metro.

Another reason that makes the bout so popular and compelling is the difference between the boxers' personalities. Norm Whitehurst, coordinating producer for ESPN Sports explains Mayweather is the brash, multimillionaire who burns $100 bills for fun and flaunts his money with exotic car collections and private jets, while Pacquiao is the quiet-spoken, always-smiling Filipino congressman who may very well be president of his country someday.

"You have two clashing personalities that people fall behind," Whitehurst said. "So the fan bases of both fighters, both hardcore fans and new fans, are very passionate."

Prediction

"I think Floyd Mayweather has the better chance of winning this fight. Floyd is taller, has a longer reach, he's never been defeated and he'd never been knocked out."

James Blears, boxing journalist

Since 2010, boxing aficionados began to speak of the possibility of negotiating a fight between Mayweather and Pacquiao. Experts and hundreds of boxing fans long demanded the encounter, because at the time both were at the peak of their careers. Indeed, they were in a better age to face a fight of this magnitude. However, the lack of agreement between two teams and a dispute over random drug testing delayed the fight for five years.

Although there has been much hype and expectancy surrounding the bout, the five-year delay in arranging the event has been criticized and the match's allure has been detracted somewhat after the defeat of Pacquiao against Mexican boxer Juan Manuel Marquez by knockout with one second remaining in the sixth round in 2012.

Yet Mark Butcher, editor of Boxing Monthly Online, thinks this is the best time for Mayweather and Pacquiao.

"The Filipino has since rebuilt his career and, with Mayweather's incredible reflexes dulling with age, there is a strong argument that this fight will be more competitive than had they fought at their respective peaks in 2010," Butcher explained.

The age of the boxers has also become a hot topic for discussion. By fight time, Mayweather will be 38 years old, while Pacquiao be 36. The experts recognize that boxing is a dangerous sport and that the risks are increasing due to the age of sportsmen. However, they agree both American and Philippine boxers are true professionals and enjoy excellent physical condition despite their age.

Despite all the controversy surrounding the fight, there is no doubt that the showdown between Mayweather and Pacquiao will be one of the most spectacular and memorable fights of this era whatever the outcome will be.

"Don't be surprised if there is a controversial outcome and an even more lucrative rematch," Butcher said.
